Built for how WNC businesses actually work.

No hype. No jargon. Just real results.

Most AI tools overpromise and underdeliver. These four prompts are different — they're built around what local service businesses in WNC actually need to know. Copy one, paste it into any AI tool, add your own details, and get a useful answer in under five minutes.

These prompts work with ChatGPT, Claude, Gemini, or any AI tool you already use. You don't need an account, a subscription, or any technical background. Just copy, paste, and read what comes back.

Audit My Local Search Presence

PROMPT 01

Act as a local SEO consultant for small businesses in Asheville, NC. I'll paste my business name, current description, and main services. Give me 3 specific changes to improve how I show up on Google Search, Google Maps, and Nextdoor. Focus on what matters most for a local service business — not generic SEO advice.

Most Asheville businesses are invisible in local search without knowing it. Outdated listings, missing categories, and zero Nextdoor presence cost you customers every day. This prompt gives you a specific, prioritized fix list based on your actual business description — not generic SEO advice that applies to everyone.

Copy the prompt. Add your business name, a short description, and your main services after it. Paste the whole thing into ChatGPT, Claude, or Gemini. You'll get 3 concrete changes you can act on immediately. Works best when you're specific — the more detail you give, the sharper the output.

Strengthen My Social Media Voice

PROMPT 02

You're a digital marketing strategist for service businesses in Western North Carolina. I'll paste 3 of my recent social posts. Tell me what's working, what's missing, and how to make future posts feel like they're coming from a real local business owner — not a generic brand.

Generic AI-written social posts get ignored because they sound like everyone else. The problem isn't the topic — it's that the voice doesn't feel local or human. This prompt puts three of your real posts under a microscope and identifies exactly what's landing and what's falling flat, so your next post sounds like you.

Copy the prompt. Paste in 3 of your actual recent posts — don't clean them up first. Let the AI see what you're really publishing. You'll get specific feedback on voice, local resonance, and what to change going forward. Takes about 2 minutes and most owners are surprised by what they learn.

Evaluate My Website's First Impression

PROMPT 03

Act as a first-time visitor to my Asheville-based business website. I'll paste my homepage text. Tell me: Does it clearly say what I do and who I help? Is there a clear next step? What would make a local customer stay instead of leave? Skip general web advice — give me specific, actionable feedback.

Most small business websites fail in the first 8 seconds — not because they're ugly, but because they don't answer the two questions every visitor asks immediately: what do you do, and can you help me? This prompt simulates that first visit and tells you exactly where you're losing people before they ever call.

Copy the prompt. Paste in your homepage headline and the first paragraph or two of your main content. The AI will tell you whether your message is clear, whether there's a compelling reason to stay, and what a local customer would do next. Don't clean it up — paste it as-is.

Find Where You're Losing Time

PROMPT 04

You're an operations consultant for small service businesses. I'll describe how I currently handle booking, follow-up, and customer communication. Identify the one or two places where I'm most likely losing time or dropping the ball — and suggest the simplest fix I could implement this week.

Every service business has a leak — a step in the booking, follow-up, or communication process where time disappears or customers fall through the cracks. Most owners know something is off but can't see it clearly from the inside. This prompt gives you an outside perspective in under 5 minutes.

Copy the prompt. Describe how you currently handle a new inquiry from first contact to confirmed booking, and how you follow up afterward. Be specific — mention the tools you use, how fast you respond, and what typically falls apart. You'll get a direct diagnosis and a fix you can implement this week.

These prompts barely scratch the surface of what is possible.
